Concordia University, St. Paul
Doctor of Physical Therapy Program

Health Risks

Being a DPT student carries with it risks related to physical, chemical, infectious disease, psychological, and radiation hazards. These risks can be controlled through the responsible application of procedures designed to minimize them. DPT students are encouraged to consult with academic or clinical faculty members when they are concerned about the risk of working with a particular patient or procedure.